INGREDIENTS

- ¼ cup pure honey
- 3 tablespoons whole grain mustard
- 1 ½ tablespoons olive oil, divided
- Zest of 1 lemon (1-2 teaspoons), after zesting cut the lemon into wedges for serving
- 1 large or 2 small garlic cloves, finely minced (2 teaspoons)
- ½ teaspoon dried thyme
- ½ teaspoon fine salt, more to taste
- ¼ teaspoon black pepper
- 4 salmon filets, about 1 inch thick (4-5 oz each)
- Cooking spray
- 1 large head broccoli, cut into florets (4-5 cups)
- 1 lb small red or yellow potatoes, cut in half if large

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Preheat the oven to 400°F.
2. In a small bowl, whisk together the honey, mustard, 1 tablespoon oil, lemon zest, garlic, thyme, salt, and pepper. Taste and adjust salt as needed. Set aside 3 tablespoons of the sauce for tossing with the potatoes.
3. Place the salmon fillets in a shallow bowl. Spoon the remaining honey mustard mixture over top and use a spatula or marinade brush to coat the salmon on all sides. Set aside.
4. Generously mist a large rimmed baking sheet pan with cooking spray. Place the potatoes on the prepared baking sheet. Toss the potatoes with the 3 tablespoons reserved honey mustard mixture until well coated. Spread the potatoes, cut-side down, in an even layer on the pan. Bake for 15 minutes.
5. Remove the pan from the oven and push the potatoes to one side so they take up about ⅓ of the pan.
6. Add the broccoli florets to the opposite end of the pan leaving room for the salmon in the middle.
7. Drizzle the broccoli with the remaining ½ tablespoon olive oil and toss until evenly coated. Sprinkle with a pinch of salt.
8. Place the salmon on the baking sheet between the potatoes and broccoli. Cook until the salmon flakes easily with a fork, another 8-13 minutes, depending on thickness.
9. Serve with lemon wedges.

NOTES

If using very thin salmon fillets (less than 1 inch thick), cook the broccoli for 5 minutes before proceeding with step 8 (adding the salmon to the pan) OR cut your broccoli into smaller pieces and proceed with the recipe as written.
