A cake with zucchini

The glass has a capacity of 250 ml.

Dough mold: sheet metal 18/27 cm or cake cake with a diameter of 24-26 cm.

Remove the eggs and courgettes from the refrigerator beforehand.

Vegetables were weighed before possible peeling/preparation.

Before preparing the cake, I also encourage you to read the entire post first, to prepare in advance for the next steps of preparing the cake.

✓ Step 1: Wipe the courgettes

Prepare the courgettes first. If you have young courgettes, which have a delicate peel and an interior with not yet educated seeds, then zucchini is enough to just wash, cut off the ends and wipe on the grated, on large eyelets. If the courgettes are not so young anymore, then I recommend to additionally peel them from the peel and hollow out the seeds.

In the grated zucchini, pour half a teaspoon of salt. Mix the whole thing and set aside for a few minutes for the zucchini to let go of the juice. Squeeze the grated zucchini slightly from the excess water. Pour the salt water. Young courgettes can let go of more water, the older ones much less.

✓ Step 2: Whisk the eggs with sugar + oil and zucchini

Into a large bowl, pour 4 larger eggs. Pour 150 g of sugar and start whipping eggs with sugar on the fluff. It can take a few minutes, so it is worth reaching for a mixer and setting the highest speed. Once you have obtained a bright egg cream in which the sugar has completely dissolved, reduce the barn and constantly whisking the mass pour 200 grams of oil (about 210 ml). Pour the oil slowly, with a thin trickle. Add all the grated zucchini to the egg mass with oil. You mix the dough with a spatula.

✓ Step 3: Mix the rest of the ingredients

Start heating the oven to 175-180 degrees in the baking function up/down or 160-165 degrees with a thermocircuit.

In a separate bowl, mix together 460 g of cake or universal wheat flour, 3 tablespoons of cocoa (they can be with a light tip), 2 flat teaspoons of baking powder and half a teaspoon of baking soda.

✓ Step 4: Connect everything together

Add the loose ingredients to a bowl with wet ingredients. Mix the whole thing with a spatula. Do not mix the ingredients for too long, only to combine the whole into a uniform dough.

✓ Step 5: Pour the dough into the mold

Lay the bottom of the mold with dimensions, e.g. 18/27 cm with baking paper, and the sides grease only with oil residues. Put the whole dough into such a prepared form.

✓ Step 6: Bake the dough

Place the zucchini dough mold in the oven preheated to 175-180 degrees (heating up/down). Select the middle shelf. Bake the dough for about an hour, to the so-called dry stick. If after removing the sticks from the dough it is dry, then you can confidently turn off the oven. Do not be afraid that the dough has not been baked and try not to extend the baking time too much. Baked dough can dry too long and will not be so moist anymore.

After baking, slightly open the oven door. After 10 minutes, open the door and remove the dough from the oven. Take off your sides and put the dough on the grill, to cool down. I first sprinkled my zucchini and cocoa cake with powdered sugar, then a little cocoa.

Tip: You place the dough mold in the oven on the already preheated, thin plate from the oven's equipment or on the grill. The plaque or grille should be placed on such a level that the baking mold located on them is located about in the middle of the chamber (not too close to the upper and lower heaters).

If the dough is not eaten on the day of baking, wrap it loosely in breakfast paper and keep in a food bag in a dry and cool room. The dough will stay fresh for at least 4 days.

Enjoy.

Dziękuję za wspólne gotowanie.
