

Ania Cooks
Only the best recipes

Potato dumplings in Asian

Preparation time: 1 hour

Number of servings: about 1 kg

In 100 g of dishes:

Energy value 145 kcal

Carbohydrates 30 g

- That's sugars 2 g

Protein 2 g

Fats 2 g

Diet: gluten-free, low-sugar, low-fat, vegetarian

✓ Ingredients for thick noodles

☐ cooked and passed by the press potatoes 500 g

☐ potato starch 250 g

☐ ordinary water 100-125 ml

☐ salt 1/3 teaspoon

✓ Ingredients for Asian sauce

☐ soy sauce 3 tablespoons

☐ Crispy chili in soybean oil - Lao Gan Ma 1 tablespoon

☐ garlic 2 teeth

☐ ordinary water 50 ml

☐ rice vinegar 10 ml

☐ sugar or syrup, e.g. maple 1 tablespoon

☐ chili flakes pinch

✓ Supplements to serve

☐ chives and/or roasted sesame any quantity

Potato dumplings in Asian

Read the whole recipe first, so that you can plan the work well and complete the ingredients and plan the preparation steps. Be sure to take a look at the end of the recipe, where I give a few other, more Polish ways to deliciously serve these dumplings.

✓ Step 1: Grind the cooked potatoes

You need 500 grams of already cooked potatoes. Cooked potatoes are best ground in a razor or pass through the press still warm. Remember that warm potatoes are easier to pass through the press than cold potatoes from the refrigerator, which then become hard. However, if you had potatoes in a razor, you can also use potatoes from dinner, from the previous day.

If you are just planning to cook potatoes, then I recommend using about 700-800 grams of potatoes (weight before peeling). Put the potatoes in salted water and cook until soft. It is important to always dry the potatoes well after cooking. I recommend after pouring water, put a pot with potatoes on a low power of the burner for a minute to evaporate the water from between the potatoes.

PoradaTip: For noodles use meal potatoes. Type C or possibly B will be best.

✓ Step 2: Add the starch, water and salt

In a bowl with ground potatoes, pour 250 g of potato starch (i.e. potato flour). Add 1/3 teaspoon of salt, then pour 80 ml of water, preferably cooled from the kettle. Knead the whole thing by hand until the mass is combined into a uniform, compact dough. If the dough is too dry and does not want to stick, add water. Always match the amount of water to the potatoes, because some after cooking are more mealy and others are moister.

✓ Step 3: Form noodles

Note: this cake/weight will crumble. It is very important to peel off the mass after a piece of mass and slowly, gently and patiently form and roll a thick roller of the dough from it. Successively cut off pieces the size of a medium walnut and again, again slowly, gently and carefully, form with your hands (roll on a dry board without the addition of flour) each piece on a thick noodle roughly thick index finger, possibly a little thinner.

The length of the noodles is arbitrary, but I recommend not to make them too long so that they do not have to curl and twist in a pot, in which they will be cooked later. This could make it harder to cook noodles.

✓ Step 4: Cook the noodles

Pour water into a larger pot of diameter. Boil me and add a teaspoon of salt, then reduce the power of the burner so that the water only gently boils. Start adding noodles to the pot. Place a few at once so that they are not in the pot too much. The dumplings will probably fall to the bottom, so wait about 30-40 seconds and only then very gently challenge them from the bottom, e.g. with a spatula, so as to peel them off the bottom of the pot. Cook them in several series, without cover, for about a minute from the moment they come out on top. Ready noodles should be shiny and flexible. Place the fished out on a wide plate or salater.

PoradaTip: It is very important with these noodles not to cook them too long, but also not to cook them too high a burner power, because they can fall apart.

✓ Step 5: Prepare the sauce

The sauce can be started to prepare during cooking dumplings. Earlier or immediately after cooking thick noodles.

In a larger pan or in a wok place: three tablespoons of soy sauce; one tablespoon of crispy chili with Lao Gan Ma soybean oil; two cloves of garlic passed through the press, or half a teaspoon of dried garlic. Add 50 ml of plain water and 10 ml of rice vinegar, and add one tablespoon of sugar or syrup, e.g. maple. Also add a pinch of chili flakes. The whole, mix, boil and turn off the burner.

Tip : Instead of Lao Gan Ma, you can only add only chili flakes with the addition of sesame oil. To make the sauce more intense, you can also add a tablespoon of miso paste. Then give two tablespoons of soy sauce less, but a little more water. the taste can also be enriched by adding two tablespoons of peanut butter, peanut without additives. Rice vinegar will confidently replace plain wine or apple cider vinegar in the same amount.

✓ Step 6: Combine the noodles with the sauce and serve

For a wok with hot sauce, line all the previously cooked thick noodles. Just mix it all. If the noodles are still warm, do not heat the contents of the pan. If they have cooled, then the whole only slightly heat without cover. Serve the potato dumplings in Asian immediately, with chives and an extra portion of chili flakes.

✓ Step 7: Other ideas for giving noodles

In the picture below, a portion of delicious potato dumplings without eggs and flour, with the addition of chives and chili. Noodles can also be served in several other ways, not necessarily in the Asian style.

Unusually, in the sweet version I recommend to serve such newly cooked noodles poured with melted butter with breadcrumbs, cinnamon and sprinkled with cane sugar. To this you can also add a tablespoon of thick, sour cream. You can also try the version with yogurt, with cream and with fruit, with sugar..

More Polish flavors are noodles served with previously chopped finely and oil-fried onions, with the addition of e.g. bacon or without bacon. The whole is worth serving with crushed cottage cheese.

Enjoy.

Dziękuję za wspólne gotowanie.

Będzie mi miło jeżeli dodasz komentarz ze zdjęciem. Ania

