Ukrainian borscht with botwinka

Before you start preparing the soup, I recommend first reading the whole recipe to prepare in advance for the next stages of execution. When cooking the base, it is worth preparing all the vegetables. Pot: Best with a minimum capacity of 4.5 l.

I also invite you to the FAQ. You will find there many additional ideas for replacements and a faster, meatless version of the soup.

✓ Step 1: Cook the base for the soup

For cooking the soup, choose a large pot with a capacity of about 4.5 liters or more, preferably high quality and with a well-fitted lid, thanks to which the water does not evaporate too quickly during cooking.

In a pot, place a large quarter/leg of chicken, or a large turkey neck or a turkey wing. Also add two grains of English herb, two bay leaves, as well as a cleaned and possibly finer one bunch of young hair. The bunch should have leeks, a small celery root and parsley root and a few carrots. Also pour over a flat teaspoon of salt and pepper. Pour 1.5 very cold water into the pot.

Cover the pot with a cover. Bring the soup to the boil. Then reduce the power of the burner to such that the soup only slightly boils. Cook it like that for an hour.

Tip: In the meat-free version, it is enough to cook the hair for about 30 minutes, and pour one tablespoon of oil into the pot later. In the simplest version, only 1.5 liters of high-quality vegetable or poultry broth are enough.

✓ Step 2: Add beets and potatoes

After this time, with the help of a strainer, howl all the ingredients. Leave the broth alone in the pot. From the leg of chicken, wings or from the neck I recommend to remove the meat itself and put it again in a pot. Add peeled and grated beets cut from the botwinka, as well as 300 grams of scrubbed, rinsed and chopped young potatoes. Cover the pot with a cover, reduce the power of the burner and cook it for another 5-8 minutes on a low power burner.

Tip: Vegetables from Italian food can be used to bake pâté or as one of the ingredients for stuffing dumplings or pancakes with meat.

✓ Step 3: Add the beans and garlic

After this time, add two cloves of garlic to the pot. 300 grams of asparagus, yellow or green beans, cut off the ends and cut into smaller pieces, then add to the soup together with the garlic. Again, cover the pot with a cover and cook the soup for about 5-8 minutes.

Tip: Instead of asparagus beans, you can use white beans from a can, drained from the flood. However, add such beans at the very end, before turning off and seasoning the soup.

✓ Step 4: Add the botwinka, cabbage and butter

About 300 grams of cut off the head of young cabbage, e.g. conical, cut finer and add to the pot. In the same way, cut a finely well-washed botwin, from which young beets were previously cut. We give the botwinka together with the leaves. At this stage, also add about 20 grams of butter.

Mix the contents of the pot. If you think that the broth is not enough, wait until the vegetables release the juice during cooking and only decide whether you want to add more water or broth. Cover the pot with a cover and cook the soup for 5-8 minutes.

✓ Step 5: Finish and serve the soup

At the very end, pour a minimum of 3 tablespoons of freshly squeezed lemon juice into the soup or 2-3 tablespoons of apple cider vinegar. Also, add a whole bunch of chopped dill.

Mix the soup and check its taste. It is very likely that you will need to add even half a teaspoon of salt and pepper to the soup (add gradually). Also try to add a bit of sugar and more lemon juice. If the soup is too thick, i.e. it has evaporated too much water, then add about 200 ml (more or less) of the best light vegetable or poultry broth. Finally, pour water.

Serve Ukrainian borscht with botwinka with sour cream 10-18%. Mascarpone and even Greek yogurt also fit very well here. For this, an additional portion of dill and freshly ground pepper and baguette.

Enjoy.

Dziękuję za wspólne gotowanie.
